Review: This brief illustrated narrative gives the history, founding, and organization of the first collective farm in China. The farm is said to be located 40 li east of Chia-mu-ssu on the southern banks of the Sungari River. Describes the role played by party members in organizing the collective farm and makes it clear that the establishment of mutual aid teams and of producers cooperatives are the foundations for the establishment of collective farms. Although written for propaganda purposes, the booklet reveals some of the reactions of the masses to the socialization of agriculture.
